HARDEN TELLS GERMAN GOVT. PLAIN TRUTHS

Attacks The Shams, Pretenses And Errors Of Germany's Policy.

PRAISES COURSE OF PRESIDENT WILSON

Justifies Entry Of U. S. Into War And Denies We Are "Dollar Chasers."

COPENHAGEN, MAY 1.—Maximilian Harden, the German "enfant terrible," publishes in the latest issue of Die Zukunft another daring frank article exposing to German readers the "shams, pretenses and mistakes" of their government's policy.

The article is devoted to the entry of the United States into the war, which Herr Harden warns the people must be taken most seriously, both from the moral side, as a symptom of the weakness of Germany's appeal to the neutral world and the failure of her foreign policy, and because of the physical aspects of the weight that America will ultimately be able to throw into the scale.

In the article he reviews the steps leading to the German and American peace proposals, the proclamation of unrestricted submarine war and the American declaration of a state of war, and declares, with a daring to which probably no other German publicist is equal, that Germany's peace overtures were put forward only as—Continued On Page Three—

Offer Troops To The Allies

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, MAY 1.—President Wilson and his cabinet held a very brief session today, and while the subject of sending American troops to France at an early date was not discussed formally, it became known definitely that the prevailing view among administration officials is that a force should be sent as soon as possible.

It also became known that the government has offered to send troops abroad but whether trained regulars or National guardsmen or both shall be sent, is undecided.

Juvenile Charge Not Considered

The charge of wilful destruction of property brot by Mrs. Alinda Rusk against Wilbur Vensel, a minor, both residing at Plainfield, has been dismissed from the juvenile court. The lad had picked a few flowers from a bed. The court held the matter too trivial for more than a reprimand.

OLINGER GIVES LAND THAT SOME BOY MAY

WASHINGTON, MAY 1.—The United States has already placed a considerable amount of ship tonnage at the disposal of the entente allies. Lord Eustice Percy, ship expert with the British mission, said today that the government has supplied certain vessels to be used according to the allies' needs, but refused to indicate what they were or if they were the seized German ships.

Lord Percy declared that the present rate of British construction of ships and the present estimated American rate could not keep pace with the present rate of destruction by submarines.

"The balancing figure in the world struggle," said Lord Percy, "is the tonnage the United States can supply."

Lord Percy's announcement was the first intimation that the shipping conferences had actually resulted in an agreement. It was taken as a forerunner of a very wide degree of cooperation in which the present tonnage and the future building powers—Continued On Page Six—

Nothing Damaged But The Hen Fruit

A small boy and a basket of groceries came to grief on Chestnut street about 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Ralph Gaines, aged about 12, started across the street with a basket of groceries upon his arm. He failed to notice the approach of a Ford auto driven by a man named Vance, and before he could stop, his roller skates had carried him directly in the path of the car. Although the driver tried to stop his car he could not do so in time to prevent striking the boy. The front wheel of the car passed over the boy's legs.

Fortunately young Gaines escaped with no injuries other than bruises but he bewailed the breaking of choice henfruit.

Bryant Reelected Head Of Schools

Prof. Charles E. Bryant, of Chestnut street, was re-elected superintendent of the city schools of Coshocton at a recent meeting of the board of education at the office of the Clerk of the Board, T. H. Wheeler. Prof. Bryant, who has held the position for the past three terms will serve two years at a salary of $2,500 per year.

A special meeting of the board will be held Friday evening at the office of Attorney T. H. Wheeler. Several matters of importance will come up for consideration.

Vivian Nelson Is Summoned

Funeral services for Vivian Nelson, aged 5, will be held at the home of the Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nelson, of N. Fifteenth St. this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, and will be in charge of Rev. A. B. Markley. Burial will be made at the South Lawn cemetery.

The child died Monday evening from a three-weeks illness from meningitis. A sister, Lillian, 18 months old, died of the same malady three weeks ago. Besides the parents the child leaves a brother, George 11, and Merriam, aged 14, a sister.

Conesville Girls Are Sentenced to Industrial Home

Thursday Thacker and Elma Foust, both of Conesville, were given suspended sentences to the Girls' Industrial Home at Delaware by Juvenile Judge Milo Ely Tuesday after the girls were found guilty of moral delinquency. They will be under the supervision of the probation officer and should they figure in further escapades will be taken to Delaware. Both figured in a sensational juvenile scandal a few months ago.

Little Disturbance, Report In Berlin

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN, MAY 1.—(Via London).—Efforts of the radical Socialists to celebrate May day by strikes in the munition factories failed. No parades were held and no disturbances occurred. Unofficial reports stated a few strikes occurred.

The conservative Socialists had made a vigorous campaign in opposition to any holiday today, and the indications at noon today, as this dispatch is sent, are that they were successful.

MOTOR UNIT HOLDS MEET

The first meeting of the Motor Unit class of the National League for Women's Service was held last evening at the Central school building, and was attended by twelve members. Guy Tainey gave a very instructive lecture, and all who attended are very enthusiastic over the lessons.

Hereafter, the classes will be held at 3:30 o'clock on Tuesday and Friday afternoons. The next class will be held at this time Friday, on the lawn at the home of Mrs. J. W. Shaw on Chestnut street. Some of the lessons will be given in local garages, and there is promise that a great deal of practical knowledge of automobiles will be gained by those who have enrolled in this unit.

C. Of C. Will Meet Tuesday

Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Harry Wolff, has called a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce for Tuesday evening next. The secretary has made his invitation to the meeting general and all are invited whether members of the organization or not. It is probable that an outline of the activities of the Chamber will be drafted at the meeting, although its general nature will be that of a get-together affair.

GERMANY WILL BROACH PEACE TERMS AGAIN

Offer Will Probably Come From Von Bethman Hollweg Thursday Of This Week.

THEIR MODERATION TO BE ASTOUNDING

Socialists Want Statement Of Terms With No Indemnities Nor Annexations.

THE HAGUE, NETHERLANDS, MAY 1.—(Via London).—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, will make another peace offer in the Reichstag on Thursday of this week, according to an announcement made today by the Berliner Tageblatt.

"The world will be astonished by the moderation of the German peace terms," said the General Anzeiger of Dusseldorf, Germany, quoting in a recent dispatch from Berlin a statement given out to foreign correspondents in Berlin. For several weeks it has been intimated that Germany might soon make another peace offer, and recent information from Berlin showed that Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg was expected soon to make an announcement in regard to international questions, although heretofore no statement has come from a responsible quarter that a peace offer actually would be made.

Chief Mapel Makes Report

The report of Chief Mapel of the police department for the month of April shows a gain of drunkenness over the same month last year. During the past month 76 arrests were made, 45 of them being for intoxication. For the same month last year only 45 arrests were made, 30 of which were on charges of drunkenness.

ALUMNI FAIL TO RESPOND

Little loyalty to their alma mater was shown by local members of the Coshocton High School Alumni Association, as not one responded to the call for a meeting Tuesday evening, sent out by the president, C. K. Clemens. Mr. Clemens had announced that the local papers that plans for the annual banquet would be made at a meeting of the association to be held Tuesday evening, May 1, in the Chamber of Commerce hall.

However, no plans were made, as not one of the members attended. As there were over 200 members present at the banquet last year, this failure to respond to President Clemens' announcement seems almost inexcusable.

EDWARD ROSE BURIED HERE

Last rites for Edward C. Rose will be held at the late home in Uhrichsville at 9:30, Rev. H. H. Scott officiating. The remains will be brot to Coshocton train No. 1219 and burial made at the Oak Ridge cemetery. Short services will be held at the cemetery by Rev. E. O. Buxton. Rose died at Uhrichsville Monday.

Speculators In Food Prices To Feel Stern Hand of Law, Gov. Cox

COLUMBUS, OHIO, MAY 2.—That the state is working hand in hand with the federal government "to prevent food price increases and to discourage manipulation" was the assertion of Governor Cox here late Tuesday.

Gov. addressing representatives of civic, commercial, employers and labor organizations throughout the state, said the government and state agents are making a survey of available food supply in storage and under production and that he has instructed the adjutant general to use the military police power of the state to get information where it is refused.

Prices Unjustified. "I am not one of those who subscribe to the theory that present food prices are justified," the governor said.

"Present food cost is pinching the man in the factory, the clerk in the store, some steps must be taken. "I believe there has been manipulation of food supplies and I, as governor of Ohio, will not be guided by pre—Continued On Page Five—

Mrs. Pren Metham Is Laid To Rest

Funeral services for Mrs. Pren Metham, were held at Warsaw Tuesday afternoon at the Metham home at Nellie, Rev. E. B. Shaw, of Warsaw, officiating. Mrs. Metham died Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Cate, of Madison, Florida. Burial was made at the Warsaw Valley View cemetery.

Mrs. Metham had been in failing health since the death of her husband, Col. Pren Metham on February 14. Since that time her health had steadily declined until death overcame her Friday.

Mrs. Metham had been visiting at the home of her daughter since December. For the past few years she and her husband had spent the winter months with their children in Florida.

Prior to her marriage to Pren Metham, September 1854, Mrs. Metham was Miss Sarah A. Prouditt, of Ashland. Mrs. Metham had been a member of the Episcopal church at Warsaw for a number of years and was one of the most beloved members of the church and community.

Surviving relatives are Austin Metham, of the home; Mrs. William Cate of Madison, Fla.; Mrs. George Cate, of Atlanta Ga., and John Metham of Ashland.

Child Falls Down Stairs At Warsaw

Winifred Davis, aged 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Davis, of Warsaw, was rendered unconscious for some time Tuesday afternoon when she fell down the stairs at her home. The child was coming down the stairs soon after the noon hour and tripped, falling about seven steps. Her mother rushed to her aid and called a physician. It is that the child suffered not internal injuries.

Another Juvenile Scandal Brewing

Another juvenile scandal is brewing. This became known Monday when the police turned over to the juvenile authorities two girls, one of whom, it is said, figured in the notorious beer party at the Coshocton M. E. Church some months ago. The two were being held at the county jail last night. Juvenile Officer E. C. Ringer admitted last night that he expected to investigate the case today but stated he knew nothing of the particulars at that time.

The Mardi-Gras Girls opened last night at the Pastime Theatre to a large and well pleased audience. This company is above the average tabloid musical comedy companies, the comedy is in the hands of Morris and Ormsby and left nothing to be desired. They were assisted by a levy of pretty girls and the singing was well taken care of by the Southern Harmony trio, Miss Bessie Palmer, Jesse Collins and Nick, Jenkins while patriot, finish of the Soldier Boys in Kiki and the sons of American. Here's My Boy, sang by Miss Shaw, made the play very agreeable as everything is clean and nothing said or done that could offend anyone. They carry their own special scenery for every play and change program every night.

CIRCULATION LIFE BLOOD OF NEWSPAPER

But Whitman Says It Must Be Based On Its Reader Demand.

NOT ON CONTESTS
NOR ON PREMIUMS

How An R. F. D. Carrier
Won A Horse And What The Advertiser Got.

CHICAGO, MAY 1.—At a meeting of teachers of journalism held at the Hotel La Salle, in this city, on Friday, April 27, Mr. Russell R. Whitman, managing director of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, delivered an interesting address on the work of the bureau. Mr. Whitman's organization has done and is doing a splendid work for the newspapers which comprise its membership, and one of the greatest features of the work is the raising of the circulation standard. Every editor and publisher will be interested in his remarks on this subject of publication and circulation standards. Of this he said:

By RUSSELL B. WHITMAN,
Managing Director Audit Bureau of Circulations

"Circulation is the life-blood of a publication—good circulation means just as much to the health of the publication as it does to the health of the individual. Circulation is the measure of a publication's service to its field, its readers.

"An editor must know to whom he is trying to appeal—unless he can know how many take his publication at the regular price, how many renew, he can't gauge the effectiveness of his appeal. His circulation is his pulse—his thermometer—the ultimate answer to his service—the court of last resort. If the kind of a publication he is getting out appeals to the kind of readers he is trying to reach, then the advertising appeal will be proportionate. It is the acid test.

"May I cite an illustration? I could cite hundreds. A technical publication, a good one, offered a horse and wagon to the R. F. D. carrier who could secure the most subscriptions along his route. A carrier won. But there were no renewals. An investigation showed that not one of these subscribers along that winner's route could read the English language. It was circulation—yes—but of what value to the publication or the advertiser in that publication?

"This publisher immediately abandoned premiums, prizes and all extraneous inducements to subscription. His publication today is one of the most valuable in its field to advertisers. Why? Because it bases its appeal on the editorial merit and nothing else.

Service To Readers
"The answer is service—service to your readers, to your field; this is the basis of editorial value, of business value, of advertising value. Unless an editor has exact information in regard to the circulation, he can have no basis on which to determine his editorial appeal or any measure of his real service. If the publication is given away, or bought in connection with some other and greater inducement, he will never get anywhere from the standpoint of value or merit. The editor and circulation manager should therefore work in close harmony.

"And that brings me to another question—salesmanship. It takes just as much salesmanship and of the right kind to sell a publication to the right people in the right way as it does to sell any other manufactured article. Publications do not sell themselves. Again, an editor or publisher, before he can gauge editorial appeal and service, must know that the right kind of salesmanship has been employed to sell his publication for either one of two things must be true—either the publication is not as good as it ought to be or it is not distributed effectively. It's of the utmost importance to know which.

Keep Circulation Records
"The publisher should therefore keep adequate circulation records—he should have a check on his readers at all times. The importance to a publisher of keeping accurate circulation records cannot be overestimated. Only in this way can he be sure he is getting all the revenue to which he is entitled—that his publication is right editorially—that people are buying it at full price because they want it.

"The process of publication is this—you can't put the cart before the horse. First make a good product, the best you know how—then circulate it—then get the advertising. You can't reverse the operation. A good publication gets good circulation—good circulation gets good advertising because it brings the results. Publishers should not get away from the fact that their publication is their real product—advertising only the by-product.

"Publishers are studying circulation as never before. They realize its significance—its relation to their editorial problems and to advertising.

a bridge over which Germany could pass to relentless submarine warfare. Consistent with his earlier attitude, Herr Harden has only words of high praise for President Wilson and his policy, and reveals in various passages a slighting opinion of Dr. Alfred Zimmermann's elevation to ministerial rank.

Another article by Herr Harden culminated in an appeal to Germany to put the interior of her house in order and introduce democratic principles, which the writer says is the only sure basis for future peace. Scarcely less noteworthy than his scathing criticism of German diplomacy (but not that of Count von Bernstorff, former ambassador to the United States, whose work he praises), is Herr Harden's justification to German readers of American attitude during the war and his demolition, for example, of the favorite pan-German arguments that the United States was inspired solely by dollar-chasing and looked upon war only as a source for enormous profits from munition supplies.

The United States, Herr Harden declares, could have continued to amass unmeasured riches, not from munition contracts, from which only a minute part of its income was derived, but as a world's source of supply. Instead, he adds, the United States chose for an ideal to reject a continuance of its profitable neutrality to has been in progress in Germany as to the aims of the war. The Socialists, vigorously opposed by the Pan-Germans, are urging a clear statement of Germany's peace terms, on the basis of no annexations nor indemnities. The chancellor was recently reported to have decided to defer definite formulation of peace proposals. The announcement of the chancellor's plan to make a peace offer on Thursday is given added weight by the fact that it appears in the Tageblatt, one of the most widely circulated German newspapers.

ADVERTISERS LEARN VALUE OF THE A. B. C.

What Audit Bureau Of Circulations Is Doing For the Space Buyers.

KEEPS 36 TRAINED
AUDITORS IN FIELD

Places Buying Of Circulation On Basis Of Purchase Of Ton Of Coal.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations, better known as the A. B. C., of which The Morning Tribune is a member, holds its fourth annual convention in Chicago, Friday, June 1.

Founded on the mutual desire of advertisers and publishers for truth in circulation, and to raise the circulation standard, the success and growth of the A. B. C. has been little less than phenomenal. Its membership is now over twelve hundred, composed of the country's leading advertisers, advertising agents and publishers of newspapers, magazines, farm journals, and class trade and technical publications. The total circulation represented is over sixty million and one hundred million dollars is spent annually for advertising by its space-buying members, not to mention other space buyers, both local and foreign, who use A. B. C. Standard Circulation Reports as a basis for their appropriations, but are not actively affiliated with the organization.

On Solid Basis.

It has placed the buying of circulation on the same basis as the purchase of a ton of coal, a hundred pounds of sugar, or any other commodity.

In the three years of its existence the Bureau has issued approximately ten thousand publishers' sworn statements and two thousand audit reports, constituting a reliable and authentic circulation service of inestimable value. Thirty-six trained circulation auditors are now in the field making examinations and reports. Just to give an idea of the wide scope of the service, the Bureau's staff is now working in Chicago, New York, Buffalo, Louisville, Philadelphia, Richmond, Va., Lansing, Mich., Racine, Wis., Coshocton, Ohio, Martins Ferry, O., Conning, N. Y., Salt Lake City, New Haven, Williamsport, Pa., Boston, Portland, Me., New Orleans, Washington, Ia., Greensboro, N. C., Winnipeg, Canada, Lorain, O., Meridian, Miss., Grand Forks, N. D., and Reno, Nev. It Goes Everywhere.

A B. C. Standard Circulation service is accepted everywhere as the best and most authoritative circulation information available. As an example, the Federal Trade Commission, at Washington, has just officially requested the Bureau's latest report on all its newspaper members, to be used in connection with its investigation of the newspaper situation.

The Bureau is a thoroughly democratic organization, each member having a voice in its conduct. The president is Louis Bruch, vice-president of the American Radiator Company, and one of its directors and treasurer is Howell L. Rogers, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Advertisers and publishers in other countries have been watching the growth of the A. B. C. idea with great interest, and information has been received that both England and Sweden contemplate similar organizations in the near future. One of the leading newspapers in Cuba has also asked for an A. B. C. audit of its circulation, and several South American countries have asked for information.

THREE GREAT FLYERS COME TO SPEEDWAY

RUTH LAW, KATHERINE STINSON AND BAXTER ADAMS TO GIVE EXHIBITIONS.

With the arrival of a contract for the appearance of Katherine Stinson, the noted international aviatrix, at the Cincinnati Speedway on Decoration Day, May 29, as an added feature to the Second Annual International Sweepstakes race, the officials of the Speedway feel justified in announcing the greatest aviation event staged in this section of the country. The acquisition of Miss Stinson to the list of flyers gives the Speedway three of the most noted air pilots in the world as a Memorial Day attraction. The contract of Miss Ruth Law, who holds the woman's long distance flying record in a flight from Chicago to New York, having already been received, while Baxter Adams, reputed to be the equal of any aviator in America in the matter of giving thrilling exhibitions, will be added to the list within the next few days.

According to the present plans of the Speedway officials the day's sports will be inaugurated with a series of thrilling aviation exhibitions by Miss Law, Miss Stinson, Adams and others. Following this, there probably will be one or more motor cycle races. The next feature will be the three races for amateur auto drivers, after which a second aviation program will be given, the day's sport concluding with the 250-mile Second Annual International Sweepstakes race, the contestants in which will be sent off promptly at 2.30 o'clock.

Some of the engraving found in Forest Ranger Sullivan in recently uncovered ruins of New Mexico and Arizona are said to lend a strong support to the claim of Chinese origin of the Sun, who lived in the 25th century before North America was known to the Chinese under the name of Fusang or Fusan. It was said to be a continent lying 6,500 miles to the east of Asia. He said that two Buddhist priests sailed from China to Fusan, landing in what is now Mexico, where they taught their religion to the natives and built temples.

Poultry Profits to Remain High

Present conditions point to a continued advance in the price of poultry products sufficient to justify greatly increased hatching in spite of the high price of feed.
 The number of chicks hatched on Ohio farms is at least 40 per cent below normal for this season of the year according to reports received from all parts of the state. The reasons given by farmers for this shortage are poor hatches during the early part of the hatching season, the high value of eggs for market and the advancing cost of poultry feeds. Because of the high cost of feed, many farmers are hatching only enough chicks to supply poultry for the home table.
 Poultry raisers will no doubt find it profitable to set as many eggs as possible during May. If they are properly fed and handled the pullets hatched from eggs set this month should begin to lay during November or the first of December. Cockerels of the heavier breeds, such as Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds, Wyandottes and Orpingtons, hatched from eggs set this month should make eight to ten-pound capons by January.
 Prices for poultry products of all kinds have advanced steadily with the advancing cost of feeds, so that the margin between the cost of production and the farm selling price is as great or greater than usual.

Perfect Health Is Every Woman's Birthright

A Prescription That from Girlhood to Old Age Has Been a Blessing to Womanhood.

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, when a woman passes through the changes of middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe organic disturbances.

At these critical times women are best fortified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, an old remedy of proved worth that keeps the entire female system perfectly regulated and in excellent condition.

Mothers, if your daughters are weak, lack ambition, are troubled with headaches, lassitude and are pale and sickly, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just what they need to surely bring the bloom of health to their cheeks and make them strong and healthy.

For all diseases peculiar to woman, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a powerful restorative. During the last 50 years it has banished from the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, worry, misery and distress caused by irregularities and diseases of a feminine character. If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister need help get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form at any medicine dealer to-day. Then address Doctor Pierce, Invalids' Remedy, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free. You can also obtain a 136 page book on woman's diseases, sent free.

Use The Disk Before Plow

The disadvantage of late spring plowing can be overcome by disking before plowing. When the soil becomes dry and cracked before plowing it turns over lumpy. The clods which lie at the bottom cause air spaces and poor union of surface soil with the sub-surface. Rolling, disking and harrowing will produce some fine earth on top but will not eliminate entirely poor condition lower down. With such a seedbed, especially if it does not rain frequently, there will be slow germination of seeds and excessive dryness, as the clods and air spaces will prevent ready movement of capillary moisture from the subsoil up into the zone of root growth. If disked before being plowed, the hard soil will become mellow. As the water moves upward from below and is prevented from evaporation by the mulch on top, the moisture content of the soil to be plowed will thus be increased. When plowed, the loose disked soil forms a more compact union with the unplowed subsoil so that there are no large air spaces and soil moisture can move upward readily when needed. Such treatment is unnecessary on land which can be plowed early.

Each half day's plowing should be harrowed before leaving the field. When the soil is allowed to become dry after plowing, clods are formed which are not easily broken up and which are a bar to a perfect seed bed. In their haste to get their plowing finished many farmers turn over a whole field before touching it with disk or harrow. Time is lost, however by this practice. The clods which form make necessary one or two extra workings of the soil. By adopting the better plan of harrowing the soil the same half day on which it is plowed time is saved, moisture is retained and a better seed bed is secured. All of these factors are important this spring when labor is scarce and a serious food shortage confronts the world.

The governor declared personally for a federal guaranteed price for farmers' staple food crop.

For Conscription.

Discussing patriotic service which must be rendered in the present crisis Cox praised the principle of conscription, declaring that "nothing is more democratic than that every man of fighting age and strength should answer the call to defend his country."

Urging increased food production, Cox again advocated setting hands of the clock forward an hour throughout the state for the summer months, declaring it would not only aid farmers but would give city workers an hour more of daylight for backyard gardening and recreation.

Miss Wilma Fenton Weds In Indiana

Friends here have received word of the marriage of Miss Wilma Fenton, daughter of Mrs. Jessie B. Fenton of Indianapolis, and Floyd Verne Salisbury, which took place in Indianapolis last Saturday.

The bride is the daughter of the late J. S. Fenton, former superintendent of the Coshocton Public Schools. She left here with her parents sixteen years ago, at which time they moved to Oxford. She is a graduate of the Oxford High School, and has been studying art in Indianapolis. She has visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Boyd on Park avenue a number of times and is very well known in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury will make their home in Vincennes, Ind.

Embarrassment at Least. Personally, we can think of nothing more disconcerting than to be an elderly man with some ready money and a liberal income, and to be counting up our wives some day and find one over, as is often the case with some persons.—Kansas City Star.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

We are in receipt of the following communication from a reader in reference to capital punishment:

What are the statistics in regard to capital punishment; does it serve as a deterrent to manslaughter and similar crimes in those states which inflict it, or the reverse? Has Ohio ever voted on the abolition of capital punishment and what was the result?
J. R.

We have frequently seen the statistics bearing on the efficacy of capital punishment to deter men from taking human life, but do not have them at hand. There is no question, however, that capital punishment DOES NOT lessen manslaughter in those states of this union or in any other country where it is still in vogue.

It was voted on in Ohio in 1912 and twice before. In 1912 it was submitted in the form of a constitutional amendment, being the second of forty-two proposals. It was beaten by about 40,000 votes, a slender margin considering the heavy vote cast and the brief educational campaign conducted to uproot the vast amount of prejudice against doing away with the death sentence.

Nevertheless, capital punishment is doomed in every civilized land. Year by year its opponents gain strength. Something like six states in the union have already abolished it. In this country, in 1912, a scant 300 majority for the retention of the death penalty was recorded. We believe the moral sentiment of the people of Ohio by this time has turned and that if the amendment for the abolition of capital punishment were re-submitted it would carry.

In the campaign of 1912 The Tribune strongly urged on its readers to vote to abolish this relic of barbarism in Ohio. And since the question has been raised again by a reader and while the public, in the absence of a campaign on the issue, is in a more judicial frame of mind, it will not be amiss to review what we consider the material reasons why the death penalty should have no place in the statutes of a civilized country.

In the first place, it is NOT a deterrent of manslaughter. No longer than three centuries ago there were approximately 200 capital crimes in England and, in fact, in almost all civilized nations. Now the number has been cut to one or two or three. And just in proportion as the death penalty has been dropped has crime decreased in every country in the world. In truth, the more often capital punishment is invoked the oftener do men take the risk of incurring it. We repeat that while we have not the statistics at hand the impression is distinct that in those states where capital punishment is the law manslaughter is the most frequent.

Not only history, but science is against capital punishment. There is no justice in the legalized killing of men. It is revenge. It is retaliation. It is a reversion to the most primitive and brutal instincts of the race. Cruelty is not and never was the handmaiden of justice, and capital punishment is the essence of cruelty and brutality. The death penalty will do more evil than war ever settles, anything, or the fear and the threat of burning eternally in hell's fire will drive men to righteous deeds.

But back of all this is a higher law, the natural law. The State does not give life and the State has no right to take life away. If it is wrong for an individual to commit murder it is equally wrong for an organization or more, the State, to commit murder. It is on the stretched victim of the death penalty that suffers from its infliction, it is the State, not the man, who is debauched. There is no question of the poor fellow's consent in a murder, both on the man who did the crime and the man who looks on and witnesses the atrocious details of an execution in a hangman's noose.

It is not the function of the State to kill but to CURE. Let us, as an organized society pass up to the Power which gives life the responsibility of taking it. Let us in the social compact be content with enjoining the criminal and the tendency to all sorts of crime. Let us go to the mother, the father, the school and first clear out the pockets of society's share of crime and we will all be surprised how little crime there will be left.

We are slowly but surely covering the brutality of the past. The barbarian and criminal are being rooted out. As we become more enlightened we shall be more merciful.

THE GIANT
BY WALT MASON

You have had a lot of you, Kaiser Bill, and a lot more you will have, Kaiser Bill, on the front of the West straps his hands on his breast, and a yell goes up from your nest, Kaiser Bill. Patient was the good, long, Kaiser Bill, bearing injury and wrong, Kaiser Bill, hoping that a ray of sense would pervade your errand and that you'd let up your offense, Kaiser Bill. But you tramped the giant's toes, Kaiser Bill, and you tweaked the giant's nose, Kaiser Bill, now you see the giant rise, with the war light in his eyes, and he'll sink you Prussian snips, Kaiser Bill. You're exhausted by the strain, Kaiser Bill; full of weariness and pain, Kaiser Bill; you are going stony broke, and your folks will bear the yoke of taxation till they creak, Kaiser Bill. You have drained your last resource, Kaiser Bill, in your work that's rude and coarse, Kaiser Bill; dotards who are bent and gray, children from their schoolyard play, you are dragging to the fray, Kaiser Bill. But you're not the West, Kaiser Bill, has an ample ened we should—we DO—become less cruel, less brutal, less blood thirsty, less morbid, less fiendish in all our relations. As the death penalty for crime has receded from 200 to say, two, we have curbed our criminal instincts in the same proportion. The abolition of capital punishment would be followed immediately by a surprising decrease in cases of manslaughter.

The spirit of Christian civilization could find no finer manifestation in Ohio, and all over our union, than in the consigning of this relic of barbarism to the Past in which it flourished.

the month as agent.
In 1907 he started working for the Pennsylvania company, and learned telegraph and agency work at Painesville. Before going to Hanover, he was also stationed at Seio, and Adams Mills.

In honor of the day which marked the close of the fifty years of splendid service which he had given the company, fifteen of his fellow workmen gave Mr. Ferguson a banquet at the Empress restaurant last evening. Following the banquet, the party went to the home of Mr. Ferguson's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Webster, on Locust street, and spent the remainder of the evening. The guest of honor was presented with a handsome upholstered chair as a mark of the esteem in which he is held. O. C. Perill, Newark agent, made the presentation speech.

The following railroad men were present at the banquet: W. R. Lehigh, assistant trainmaster from Pittsburgh; H. S. Kane, agent at Carnegie, Pa.; J. W. Aber, agent at Washington, Pa.; J. E. Lehigh, agent at Canonsburg, Pa.; P. B. Cowdell, agent at Newcomerstown, Pa.; M. Sheriff, agent at Cadiz; C. F. Maynard, agent at Traway; O. C. Perill, J. L. Worth, ticket agent at Newark; J. B. Freed, ticket agent at Carnegie, Pa.; O. P. McGinnis, agent at Coshocton; I. D. Webster, local ticket agent; Daye Webster, of Ingram, Pa.; Karl Webster, of Carnegie, Pa.; and Wayne Webster, of this city.

G. B. Adams, of West Lafayette, succeeds Mr. Ferguson as agent at Hanover. Mr. Ferguson and his wife are spending a few days in this city, but they expect to continue to reside at Hanover.

--Hospital Notes--

J. W. Parks of Orchard street, underwent an operation for the amputation of the little toe on his left foot Tuesday morning at the city hospital. Parks was caught between the curbstone and wheel of his wagon a couple of weeks ago when the horse frightened at a passing automobile, the left foot being badly bruised. Drs. C. M. Nelson and F. M. Marshall performed the operation.

Nut Eating.
In general, nuts are as easily digested as other foods, if they are thoroughly masticated, and if eaten in moderate quantities. The fat of nuts thus eaten is in an emulsified state and cannot interfere with the digestion of other foods. The addition of salt does not assist their digestion in any appreciable degree.

Worldly Anxiety.
A little girl of Malda Vale was asking questions in regard to her father's brothers and sisters. She elicited the circumstance that one of them went back to heaven soon after he was born. "Hard luck," she remarked. "Very hard luck, indeed, I hope," she went on earnestly. "I do hope grandpa got his money back!"—Lloyd's News.

Be Good to Her.

When we see a woman trying to buy a newspaper on a cold day, with all the apparently necessary maneuvers involved in getting a penny out of the small pocketbook in the deep recesses of her handbag, we feel that she ought to have the vote or a mother's pension or whatever else she wants at the moment, so as to make up to her in some measure for the accident of sex.—Ohio State Journal.

Real Fortunate.

Willis—Did you ever read the story of the sword of Damocles? Just think of a man sitting through a whole meal with a sword above him suspended by a single hair. "Bah!" Willis isn't it with the woman who can dance serenely all evening with her whole wardrobe depending on a dinky little shoulder strap?

World's Thickest Tree.

It is said the largest tree known, in thickness, is a partly-decayed chestnut in Sicily, which is 60 feet across. Mexican cypress and the oriental plane have reached 40 feet. This pure California big tree and the baobab in the background, but the big tree is of greater bulk in combined height and girth and the baobab is thickest in relation to height.

Matches of Hemp.

In the use of early firearms a match consisted of a cord of hemp or similar material treated with niter so that it continued to smolder after it had been ignited. The match was attached to the cock of the musket and brought down by the action of the trigger on the powder priming.

Musk Loses Weight.

Charles Bazzoni, a French chemist, demonstrates that a grain of musk loses weight until it ceases to give off its odor, after which its weight remains the same. This proves that perfume is caused by volatile particles given off by the odoriferous body.

To Treat a Cold.

Camphor is excellent for colds and should be taken in this manner: A drop or two of camphor should be dropped on a lump of sugar which should be placed in a small wingless glass of water and a teaspoonful of this mixture taken every two hours.

BEES AND MATRIMONY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1917, by M. Quad. No. 10,000,000

Certain persons were always wondering why Baker did not smile or laugh. It was not that way and couldn't help it.

When Mrs. Baker died, after many years of quiet life, she left a daughter, Minnie, seventeen years old. Minnie was totally unlike her father. She saw the humor of things. She was inclined to be cheerful and gay. She had always laughed more or less, and her father had become used to it, as she had to his solemnities.

When the mother died the daughter took up the housekeeping, and two years had passed when she and Frank Williams fell in love. Frank was a pushing, industrious young man, and he could at least have given her as good a home as she had. He was rather afraid of the solemn faced father, but had now and then called at the house and been well received.

Young Williams had opened a commission house. The farmers brought him in stuff to sell, and he shipped it to the city. When he was receiving or shipping, his goods covered a good part of the sidewalk, but no one complained. One day as Mr. Baker was strolling about he approached the commission house just as a farmer had unloaded four big baskets of eggs. There was room for Mr. Baker to avoid those eggs, and he would have avoided them but for a big rat. The rodent ran from under the sidewalk to a lumber pile, and Mr. Baker's attention was thus distracted for the moment. He walked along with his head turned over his shoulder when his foot struck one of the baskets, and he fell forward with a crash. As was afterward ascertained, he broke all his previous records by breaking twenty-one dozen of the eggs. When he managed to extricate himself from the mess he was covered from head to heel with the white and yellow yolks of the eggs.

The farmer was one that could see the humor of things, and, though the loss of the eggs would be his, he fairly roared with laughter at the upset. No one could remember ever seeing Lemuel Baker in a temper, but he was mad now as he rose up amid those eggs. Hearing the laughter at the door, young Williams came out of his office, and, instantly recognizing his prospective father-in-law, he began to laugh too.

"You scoundrels, you villains!" roared Mr. Baker as he stood dripping with the yolks.

It was when he heard the victim's voice that young Williams came forward and expressed his sympathies.

"Go away, sir; go away!" was shouted at him. "You had those eggs placed there on purpose to trip me up. Look at me! My clothes are ruined. Don't ever enter my house again or I will give you a lawsuit!"

At the back end of Mr. Baker's half acre lot he had placed three hives of bees. There had been no trouble with them, and they had paid in honey for their keep. One day as the owner sat on his front veranda in his shirt sleeves looking down the village street and Minnie was upstairs in her room grieving over the events which had caused a separation between the lovers a wandering cow appeared upon the scene. She looked over the back fence of Mr. Baker's lot, and she saw cabbages, cornstalks and other good things to eat. She also took notice that the fence was old and shaky. She was tempted and yielded. She crashed over the fence between two of the beehives and brought them both tumbling down, and the crash was heard for a block around. The bees went for her.

Mr. Baker was the next victim, and he hurried through the front gate and went downhill toward the peacefully flowing river. His yells brought out the rest of the population, and as fast as they appeared at their doors or gates the bees gave them all proper attention. It was noised later on that at least 200 people, besides the cow, received scars to show that they had fought gallantly and well. Mr. Baker kept on to the river. Amid his pain and excitement he recollected that bees and water are enemies. To get rid of the bees he must have the aid of the river. He could not swim a stroke, and the water was deep, but when he reached the bridge over the mill he dived.

The cow had no river to plunge into and she had to keep on, bellowing at every jump until she fell exhausted. As fate would have it, young Williams was at hand to plunge into the river to the rescue of the man who had disappeared beneath the surface and he was mostly by his efforts that a rescue was made. He it was who commanded a wagon and got Mr. Baker home, and he it was who got the doctor and helped him to extract almost numberless stings.

And who was it that rubbed and banded and sat through the hours of many a long night when the doctor became worn out? Who was it who spoke sympathetic but cheering words to the man in bed and speaking at only long intervals? It was young Williams, of course. He took charge of the case after the doctor had made two visits, and he let his business go hanging to render good for evil. Three weeks had passed, and the bees' victim could at last swing his legs out of bed. It was then that he called young Williams to him and told him that he was forgiven.

For The Past Two Weeks
DR. FREDERICK BLANKER

the distinguished Specialist has been very busy in Room No. 9 Mecca Hotel, meeting the sick and afflicted in a heart to heart talk, and is now compelled to extend his time one week longer until Tuesday, May the 8th.

DR. FREDERICK BLANKER is well known all thru this section of the country for his skill in treating complicated chronic diseases as well as an expert in the art of extracting teeth without pain.

It you feel like making a little journey to room No. 9 to meet the doctor in a heart to heart talk, he will receive you in welcome and will try to explain all your ailments either from a physiological or surgical point, to your entire satisfaction. Dr. Blanker has saved many people from the hospital but no one that he has ever treated has found it necessary to go there. Of course you have tried many times to get well and possibly have resigned yourself to the fact that you are incurable. Stop and think a moment and see if all with whom you have talked have not promised you a cure and have told you that your ailments were curable. No one is curable unless the treatment is applicable to the cause and when you find a doctor that can appreciate the cause you can rest assured that you are going to get well. While you have the opportunity why not improve it and make the journey and meet the doctor face to face. No more to the waste need be said.

In the matter of extracting teeth without pain why the doctor's work is so well known that all you have to do is to come to room No. 9, open your mouth and your teeth will be extracted easily and gracefully. The doctor will say "God Bless The Journey" and meet the doctor face to face. No more to the waste need be said. Office hours 9 A. M. to 8 P. M. Sunday 9 to 12 M. Hotel Mecca, Room No. 9, Corner 3rd and Main Sts.

NO BASEBALL FOR
THE COMING YEAR

NEW YORK, MAY 1.—President Ban Johnson, of the American league, announced here this afternoon that in case the war continued until next spring there would be no attempt to open the 1918 pennant season.

Mr. Johnson stated his belief that a majority of the American league players were eligible, under the proposed terms of the conscription laws and would be called upon to serve in the army.

Mr. Johnson will leave for Washington tonight to confer with government authorities regarding the proposed tax to be imposed upon baseball clubs and the question of the enlistment of players will also be discussed.

President John K. Tener of the National league said that he had not discussed the proposition to drop baseball at the close of the present season, and that such action would depend upon the developments of the next few months.

STARS WILL DUEL ON BIG SPEEDWAY

RESTA AND DE PALMA EXPECTED TO MEET IN CINCINNATI
EVENT.

Lovers of auto speed contests may look forward to another duel between Dario Resta and Ralph De Palma in connection with the Second Annual International Sweepstakes race, to be decided at the Cincinnati Speedway on Decoration Day, May 30. Unlike former contests between these two famous drivers, the battle this year will be fought out with American-made cars, a fact which will add zest to the meeting of these international stars.

Some time ago it was announced that Resta had decided to retire from the racing game, a report that was decried by all lovers of speed contests because of the prominent place occupied by Resta in the racing game.
More recently it was reported that Resta had joined the staff of the Mercer Motor Car Company, and this news was further intensified yesterday when the officials of the Cincinnati Speedway were informed that the Mercer company had secured reservations in a local hotel for a crew of ten men, who will arrive on May 15 for the purpose of getting the Mercer entries in the big race into shape.

The natural inference from these reports is that Resta has been induced to reconsider his resolve to retire from racing, and that he will come to Cincinnati on Memorial Day to drive a Mercer car. This will bring him into direct competition with his most formidable rival of many years, Ralph De Palma, who on Tuesday entered his 12-cylinder Packard car in the 250-mile race. The fact that both Resta and De Palma will drive American-made cars will add zest to the contest between these stars and the other great drivers in the race, a majority of whom will be seen at the wheels of machines that have originated in America.

WILL DECIDE O. V. AMATEUR CHAMPS

NON-PROFESSIONAL DRIVERS WILL ENTER RACES AT SPEEDWAY.

Definite announcement has been made by the Amateur Race Board of the Cincinnati Speedway, through W.
G. Welborn, chairman, of the exact classification of cars that may start in the three amateur races now being arranged in connection with the Second Annual International Sweepstakes, to be decided on the Cincinnati
Speedway on Decoration Day, May 30.
The first race, which will be sent away immediately after the early evening exhibition by Ruth Law, Katherine Stinson, Baxter Adams and others, will be a 20-mile contest for Ford cars exclusively. Three prizes will be offered, with the title of champion Ford driver of the Ohio Valley going to the winner.

The second race will be for stripped stock car chassis over a course of 20 miles—ten laps of the track. This race will be limited to cars having a piston displacement of from 231 to 300 cubic inches, and promises to be one of the most hotly contested events ever staged on any speedway. Three prizes also will be offered in this event.

The third contest of the amateur program will be a free-for-all stripped stock car chassis race, open to any make or size of car, and bringing out a large number of eight and twelvecylinder machines.

How to Choose Calico.

In choosing calico note well the appearance of the selvedge and remember that the straighter and more even the selvedge the better the quality of the calico. White calico owes its purity to bleaching powders, which have a destructive effect on the fibers of the calico.

Would Be Liberal.

"Several men have been with the company for more than thirty years.
What shall we do to show our appreciation?" "Um. Let's see. Suppose we give each man a gold star on his collar." "Shall we require the men to pay for the same?" "No, that would hardly be fair. The company will pay half."

Hudson River 300 Miles Long.
The entire length of the Hudson river is 300 miles. From Troy to the mouth of the river in New York bay, a distance of 150 miles, the river is tidal, owing to the low grade of its bed, by which the ocean tide is able to back up. It is this lower tidal navigable portion of the Hudson that is of so much importance and, of course, the water is salt. It is regarded really an estuary of the sea. Above Albany and Troy the river is a small stream and to its source the water is fresh.

Nothing to Be Gained.
A Roman stoic philosopher was discussing one day on life and death.
"They are just the same," he said;
"there is no difference between them."
"Why don't you die, then, if there is no difference?" one of his disciples asked. "Because there is no difference," returned the philosopher.

Cast of Characters of "The Wanderer"

JETHER, son of Jesse.
GAAL, elder brother of Jether.
JESSE, father of Gaal and Jether.
HULDAH, his wife.
NAOMI, cousin of Jether.
TOLA, friend of Jether.
RISSAH, a handmaiden of Huldah.
SHELAH, servant of Jesse.
NADINA, keeper of lodgings in Jerusalem.
TISHA, daughter of Nadina.
SADYK, a seller of jewelry.
PHARIS, a Tyrrhian sea captain.
HAGGAI, a Judean friend of Jether.
MERBEL, friend of Jether.
THE PROPHET.
Dancing girls, Egyptians, Arabs, servants in waiting, Nubians, etc.

"It is I, Tisha," she said, "Tisha. He loves thee not."

"I would be loved for myself and not for my gifts," retorted Jether spiritedly. "I would give my gifts for pleasure, not as a price."

Nadina motioned to Sadyk, and the shy, doubtful, clinging old Israel came to Jether and knelt before him.

"O most noble prince, Sadyk implores thy favor," he whined.

Jether eyed him suspiciously and bade him rise. "What wouldst thou have of Jether?" he asked curtly.

The aged man rose to his feet and held out a necklace for Jether to examine.

"Wilt thou, O prince, as favorite of the gods, be first to gaze upon this necklace? It has been worn by one of the royal house of Egypt. I have refused for it a thousand shekels. But what of that? Should Tisha wear it—Tisha, the fairest offering of Babylon and thine own handmaiden great would become the fame of Sadyk, who hath other things to sell. Take it for naught to give to her. Between me and thee, great prince, what is 400 shekels?"

Tisha, with a little gurgle of pleasure, sprang close to Jether and gazed longingly upon the handle in the outstretched hand of the jeweler. She looked up at the boy and smiled seductively.

"If thou dost love me Jether, as thou sayest," she pleaded.

Jether impatiently sought to clasp her in his arms.

"Thy kiss—now—I would have thy kiss," he cried. She laughed and slipped from his outstretched arms and stood looking at him.

"First thou shalt prove thy love," he cried, whereat Nadina turned her face away to conceal a smile and even the cringing old Sadyk coughed.

Seeing Jether hesitate as moved by love he sought to catch the arm of Tisha. Nadina whispered to the jeweler:

"For what thou lovest, Sadyk, on this necklace, may our beloved lady Ishtar return to thee tenfold." She pointed to the shrine of the Babylonian goddess, and Sadyk bowed humbly in submission of the edict.

CHAPTER VII. The Shrine of Ishtar.

JETHER fumbled with his purse. He felt his store of golden coins was but light. He sought to estimate the amount he still carried, but failed. He decided not to buy the necklace. "Nay, I have not the amount with me," he said shortly.

But Sadyk would not be dismissed. At a sign from Nadina he once more approached the young spendthrift whose reckless expenditures had become the talk of all Jerusalem. Better to get something than to bear the necklace back to his chest, thought the old rascal as he whined again.

"From thee, young prince, I seek no profit. Nay, I will take a loss. The mere red gold, unwrought, is worth far more than Sadyk asks of thee."

Jether turned idly away without once more looking at the necklace.

"I like not the design," he said shortly.

"Nor do I know the value of thy gold. Begone!"

Tisha faced him angrily and stamped her foot in rage.

"Were every bend of common clay and fashioned by a beggar's hand thou, if thou didst truly love me, would give thy fortune for it. Thou canst bargain when my kisses are at stake? Bah!"

"I do not bargain," protested Jether, seeking to calm her.

"I have traveled much and always found a great prince generous," insinuated the crafty Sadyk. But Jether would not be moved.

"Another time I may buy something of thee," he said curtly and moved away, leaving mother and daughter gazing after him in amazement and consternation. For the first time Jether, the gilded fool, had shown signs of protesting against the systematic plinking indulged in by these harpists of Jerusalem.

Nadina, almost in tears, fairly screamed at Jether, as he sought to close the unpleasant interview.

"And for a paltry hundred shekels, so much as thou hast given thy friends time and again, thou hast brought tears to the eyes of my sweet dove," she wailed. "O thou Judean, dost think to own our houses, to love our daughters, to drive from their side a hundred wealthier suitors, and all for thy beauty's sake? My Tisha, thou shalt leave this stranger, who loves thee not, Begone, Sadyk. We will have no more of this vain Judean, and do thou, my Tisha, bid him farewell forever. He loves thee not."

As Jether strolled through the garden, angry at the obvious attempt to force him to pay some outrageous price for a humble probably almost worthless, the mother and daughter debated as to how to bring him once more to his knees and make him open the purse strings, which had been so loosely held since his coming months before.

"I told thee, daughter, he loves thee not," declared the mother viciously. "Thou seest how low these Judeans love. But what canst thou expect from one who scorns our lady Ishtar and who hath never laid a gift upon her altar?" Tisha, then, art to him only a handmaiden that he could purchase cheap. Thy time is wasted."

The haughty, proud and wicked sneering face of the lovely Tisha flashed ed defiance. A dangerous tone crept into her voice at this stinging insult from her mother.

"So, thou thinkest he holds me cheap, eh? She purred softly. "A thing he has bought cheap, eh? Very well, mother. Thou shalt yet see what he will do for love of Tisha. The necklace shall be mine, and more—more. He shall change his God. He shall bow down before my god."

Nadina shrank back in terror at this dreadful threat.

"Never. He will not. No man ever changeth his gods."

"Thou shalt see. I'll wager the price of the necklace he hath refused to buy me. I shall make him renounce the God of Israel and bow down in sacrifice before our Babylonian Ishtar, the goddess of love. Not only shall he renounce his God for me, not only will he buy that necklace for me, but wait and see what else that man shall do for love of Tisha."

The elder woman gazed admiringly and proudly upon her beautiful daughter. Incredulity was mingled with amazement, but she was still unconvinced.

"Thou shouldst forget this stranger from the hills of Hebron," she said sternly.

"Thou shalt know the woeing of a great sea captain. I have had word that, perchance this very night, we will have a visit from Pharis, the sea captain from Tyre, who sells on strange voyages and brings back great cargoes worth more than a king's ransom. He is even now in Jerusalem, and Alah hath been commissioned to find him and bring him to thee. This sea captain, if all I hear be true, would give thee for each kiss an emerald. And for these beads of gold—bah, he'll buy thee a thousand necklaces, if thou dost but love him."

Tisha's eyes gleamed and flashed fire.

but she cast a longing look in the direction of the distant Jether, angrily pulling to and fro in the garden.

"Keep thy sea captain until later," she cried angrily. "Thou sayest this man holds me cheap, eh? Before I can bear the advances of another sutor I must first reach this Jether his proper place and make him crawl in the dust before me. Thou sayest he holds me cheap, eh? Wait and see."

And Tisha strolled in the direction of Jether, while Nadina followed Sadyk into the house.

In a distant alcove, beneath a great big tree, Jether was lying upon several soft cushions, gazing at the sky. Sadyk, a big, delfly thrown, felt by his side. Half raising upon his arm, another fist grazed his forehead. He sprang to his feet to meet Tisha, laughing and sniggering.

"My Jether, art thou angry?" she cried and fell into his arms while his lips sought hers. Thus he held her for a few blissful moments, and then she did release her self. Arm in arm they strolled back toward the shrine of Ishtar.

"In one thing thou art right, my Jether," cooed Tisha softly, her arm around his waist. "For gold I care not." She snuggled her fingers contentedly. "Could I not have the half of Jerusalem kneeling in the dust before me if I cared only for gold and precious stones? But I am wearied of giving what thou hast never given—a proof of love. Thy words—what are thy words? All men talk words when they would have a woman. These things to please thee have I not put away what others gave me before thy coming. Now I would have thee give proofs to me."

Tisha's eyes gleamed and flashed fire.

but she cast a longing look in the direction of the distant Jether, angrily pulling to and fro in the garden.

"Keep thy sea captain until later," she cried angrily. "Thou sayest this man holds me cheap, eh? Before I can bear the advances of another sutor I must first reach this Jether his proper place and make him crawl in the dust before me. Thou sayest he holds me cheap, eh? Wait and see."

And Tisha strolled in the direction of Jether, while Nadina followed Sadyk into the house.

In a distant alcove, beneath a great big tree, Jether was lying upon several soft cushions, gazing at the sky. Sadyk, a big, delfly thrown, felt by his side. Half raising upon his arm, another fist grazed his forehead. He sprang to his feet to meet Tisha, laughing and sniggering.

"My Jether, art thou angry?" she cried and fell into his arms while his lips sought hers. Thus he held her for a few blissful moments, and then she did release her self. Arm in arm they strolled back toward the shrine of Ishtar.

"In one thing thou art right, my Jether," cooed Tisha softly, her arm around his waist. "For gold I care not." She snuggled her fingers contentedly. "Could I not have the half of Jerusalem kneeling in the dust before me if I cared only for gold and precious stones? But I am wearied of giving what thou hast never given—a proof of love. Thy words—what are thy words? All men talk words when they would have a woman. These things to please thee have I not put away what others gave me before thy coming. Now I would have thee give proofs to me."

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ab! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages at your forehead clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dizziness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate thru every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just as good.

Many men believe that billiards was not an invention says the Press of the Journal, but a growth, while others maintain, most likely because of the name, that it was a French invention and they contend that it was played by the Germans, Dutch, Italians and French long before it appeared in England. But on this matter, says the New York Sun, there is room for doubt. A number of literary references to the game may be found in Elizabethan days.

When trying a knot in rope which must stand much strain, put a stick of soft wood in the knot for it to close on. When you want to untie the knot, break the stick and pull out both ends. Your knot can be easily untied.—Farm and Fireside.

A surgeon in a Western town engaged to perform an operation of minor character upon a somewhat unsophisticated patient, asked him if he were willing to have only a local anesthetic. "Sure," replied the other. "I believe in patronizing home industry whenever you can."

GERMAN SUBS

of this country will be crippled with the allies to defeat the German submarine menace.

Every Detail Supplied.
Lord Percy stated that the British mission had supplied the American government with every detail of the shipping problem, including the total allied tonnage, the total destruction by the U-boats, the immediate needs of the allies, the present rate of construction abroad and the standardized building plans.

The American shipping board, he said, had shown the heartiest co-operation with the fullest understanding of the urgency of the situation.

"The shipping issue," said Lord Percy, "dominates everything else and is very grave indeed. Both the present British construction and the estimated American plan cannot keep pace with the present rate of destruction. Both must be speeded up very appreciably if the seas are to be kept open. The war has resolved itself into a race between the efficiency of the British and American ship yards and the German submarine."

"The balancing factor in the world struggle is the tonnage. The United States can supply. Only in case this is large can be present military service and food supply be continued. This is the most vitally serious problem which cannot be exaggerated."

Problem Up To U. S.
"The United States is one of the countries that is absolutely self-sufficient in shipbuilding. You have here the men, the materials, the incentive."

France, Italy and Japan also are building somewhat but unlike this country, must use ships to build ships thru the need of importing raw materials.

"The shipping problem is not only a matter of tonnage, but equally a matter of how fast that tonnage is used. Every method possible is being used to save shipping for the vital purposes and keep it away from non-essentials. Each of the allied nations has instituted a national shipping board while over them all is the general shipping board, sitting in London, which attempts to harmonize the demands on shipping and direct it to the most efficient uses."

"For months we have been cutting down the need for ships, until practically every vessel is now on an important mission. The British empire would be quite comfortable alone if it were not necessary to consider the needs of its allies and the neutrals."

England Must Help Allies
"For instance, there are 10,000,000 tons of exportable wheat in the empire which could easily supply England's need of 6,000,000 tons unless we were under the rigid obligation to supply our allies. France alone has been allotted 15 per cent of our total tonnage for direct military service, including 200 vessels carrying oats, wheat and steel from the United States alone."

Lord Percy gave figures to show that at the end of March 22 per cent of England's tonnage was in direct naval and military service; 24 per cent, under registration for government supplies; 22 per cent reserved thru the big lines for quasi government work, and only 22 per cent subject to the general needs of industry.

The Hamburg-American liners Portonia and Clara Manning at New York have been turned over by the American government for use of the entente allies. One ship will go to France and the other to Italy.
